

Back at the Helm: Sailing the Yaghan to Antarctica, Patagonia and the South

Navigating a World of Ice and Wonder

As the wind howled and waves crashed against the hull, Captain Paul Larsen and his crew embarked on an extraordinary journey to Antarctica, Patagonia, and the South. Their vessel, the Yaghan, a 40-foot steel sailboat, would serve as their home and sanctuary as they ventured into the icy wilderness.

With years of sailing experience under their belts, the crew was well-prepared for the challenges that lay ahead. Yet, nothing could have fully prepared them for the breathtaking beauty and awe-inspiring power of the Antarctic landscape. As they navigated through towering icebergs and sailed alongside playful penguins, a sense of wonder washed over them, reminding them of the interconnectedness of all life on Earth.
