Daisy and Violet Hilton, the world-renowned conjoined twins, were born on February 5, 1908, in Brighton, England. Their birth caused a sensation, as they were only the fourth set of conjoined twins to be born in the UK. Daisy and Violet were joined at the pelvis and shared a leg, but they had separate hearts, lungs, and digestive systems.

From an early age, Daisy and Violet showed extraordinary talents. They could sing, dance, and play the piano, and they quickly became popular performers. In 1911, they made their vaudeville debut in London, and they soon became one of the most popular acts in the world. Daisy and Violet toured extensively, performing in Europe, the United States, and Canada. They appeared in films, on television, and in countless magazines and newspapers.

Daisy and Violet's lives were not without challenges. They faced discrimination and prejudice from some people, and they were often exploited by those who saw them as a curiosity. However, they also had many fans and supporters who admired their courage and determination. Daisy and Violet were role models for people with disabilities, and they showed the world that anything is possible with hard work and perseverance.

In 1931, Daisy and Violet married two brothers, Maurice and Herman Lamb. The marriages were short-lived, but Daisy and Violet remained close until their deaths. In 1969, Daisy and Violet were hospitalized with the flu. Daisy died on January 4, 1969, and Violet died the following day. They were 60 years old.

Daisy and Violet Hilton were extraordinary women who lived extraordinary lives. They were pioneers in the world of entertainment, and they paved the way for other people with disabilities. Their story is one of courage, determination, and triumph over adversity.
