Diana was born into aristocracy in 1961. Her parents divorced when she was young, and she was raised by her father and stepmother. She met Prince Charles in 1980, and they married in a lavish ceremony at St. Paul's Cathedral in 1981. The couple had two sons, Prince William and Prince Harry.

Diana quickly became one of the most popular members of the royal family. She was known for her warmth and her connection with people from all walks of life. She also used her platform to raise awareness of important issues, such as AIDS and landmines.

In 1992, Diana and Charles separated. Their divorce was finalized in 1996. Diana continued to live in London, and she remained active in her charitable work. She also became involved in a number of high-profile relationships, including one with Dodi Fayed, the son of Egyptian billionaire Mohamed Al-Fayed.

On August 31, 1997, Diana and Dodi were killed in a car accident in Paris. The accident was investigated by French authorities, and it was determined that the driver of the car, Henri Paul, was speeding and under the influence of alcohol. Diana's death sent shockwaves around the world. She was mourned by millions of people, and her funeral was watched by an estimated 2.5 billion people worldwide.

In the years since her death, Diana has become an iconic figure. She is remembered for her beauty, her compassion, and her dedication to her charitable work. She is also seen as a symbol of hope and change. Her legacy continues to inspire people around the world.
